GIRLS! LOTS OF BEAUTIFUL HAIR

25 cent bottle of "Danderine" makes hair thick, glossy and wavy.

Removes all dandruff, stops itching scalp and falling hair.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair, soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair, but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you fail to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.—Advt.

WOMAN SURGEON, JUST FROM FRANCE, SAW WAR HORRORS

Dr. Mary Crawford Tells of a Mutilated 50,000 Turned Out of the Hospitals.

NERVE-TESTING SIGHTS

The Terrible Price Paid by Men Who Didn't Know for What They Fought.

A woman doctor's dispassionate story of the fighting in France and its frightful results was told today by Dr. Mary Crawford of No. 126 New York Avenue, Brooklyn, who has just returned from a year's active service in the American Ambulance at Neuilly, France.

"Only those who see the wounded soldiers brought back from the firing lines can have a thorough appreciation of the terrible devastation that is being wrought," she said. "Since the war began about 50,000 persons have been discharged from hospitals in France with either a leg or an arm missing, and 5,000 cases of blindness resulting from the war have been recorded. One of the saddest cases is that of Jean. But I will tell you later."

Dr. Crawford, who was the second woman ambulance surgeon to be detailed on hospital duty in New York, is one of the foremost woman practitioners in this country. On Oct. 28 she went to the American Ambulance, which is the hospital for wounded soldiers established in France by Americans.

For three months she served there as an intern under Dr. Blake, the American surgeon, and then she became a resident surgeon on the staff of Dr. Mignot. During her service of seven months under Dr. Mignot she had charge of about fifty wounded men each day.

THE SPIRIT OF WAR AND ITS BRUTAL EFFECTS.

"I would rather not tell of what is being done over there," she said when asked about the work. "The work is wonderful and the cases handled are terrible. I would say nothing at all were it not that I want to call attention to the great service that is being done by Americans in the present conflict. Also I would like to point to the effects of the war—effects that are worse than brutal."

"It was nerve-racking to be there and see those fine fellows either frightfully wounded or dying. And whenever a man died of his wounds this thought came to me: 'Why should he have been taken from his home to fight? What quarrel did he have? He was a humble man who lived in a cottage with his family and was happy. Then came the spirit of war and it has taken him away.' And then I would think of the case of Jean."

"What of Jean?" asked the reporter, whose curiosity was aroused. "I will tell you later," she replied. "It is a surgical case. Some of the surgical cases successfully treated are almost unbelievable in their results. One day a man was brought in unconscious. He had been unloading hand grenades when the wagon was struck by a German shell and there was an explosion that killed all save this patient. Thirty pieces of wood, two large nails and three iron rods came from the grenades and were stuck in his body. Then pneumonia developed. When I departed from the hospital he still was alive.

"Shrapnel and bullet wounds are the worst of all. Shrapnel wounds almost invariably result fatally. Shrapnel bullets tear a ragged hole and usually carry into the body with them some of the victim's clothing. We had the case of Jean and the case of one man whose face had been literally shot away by shrapnel at Clermont. He was the father of five children. When he was able to communicate with the surgeons he begged to be killed, and talked constantly of his family. He lived two days. There was a young surgeon—Alphonse is his first name—who was wounded in Belgium. All of his upper and lower teeth were gone. Part of the jaw was shot away and the end of the tongue was gone. "He was in a terrible plight when he reached the hospital. His patient, persistent work was discharged to restore his features so that only a scar was visible. But he had to take nourishment through his nose and also smoke cigarettes in that manner."

THE FAITHFUL TURCO AND HIS SERGEANT.

"Some other patients were Sergt. Saligues, Ahmed Ben Ahmed and Kadoum, Turco, Senegalese who were wounded at Arras. Ahmed thought of the world of Saligues, a Frenchman, who was his Sergeant. When they were wounded Ahmed crawled over to the Sergeant and gave him water. "Finally they were picked up and carried to different hospitals. Ahmed was taken to the hospital at Neuilly. Eventually the two appeared in the American Ambulance hospital. Ahmed has two wives and several children. But he doesn't talk of them as much as he does of war."

The Turco could hardly get it through their heads that they were being treated by a woman physician, and they insisted on calling Dr. Crawford "Mamma." When she told Ahmed goodbye he wept and insisted he would die if she did not remain to care for him. "Tell me about Jean," said the reporter.

"Very well. Jean is a Breton, a fine, manly fellow whose home is in Finistère. He was brought to the hospital last February. Pieces of shrapnel had penetrated the left side of his head near the forehead bone. For a time we could not find the bullet. One day Jean noticed a bullet came out of the wound in the head."

The investigation then showed the shrapnel bullet had ranged downward and lodged in the right lung. For a time he was kept alive with saline solutions. His mother and father visited the hospital, wearing wadded shoes and those quaint Breton costumes. For hours they sat by his bed.

"His temperature went up. Dr. de Bourcet decided to operate. He did, cutting into the right lung from the back, and finding a piece of shrapnel.

Then an operation was performed from the front. Jean, a patient, could follow, requesting assistance and promptly told us he was 'breathing from three sides,' meaning the incision in his back and front, as well as through the neck."

Before Dr. Crawford left the hospital she told Jean goodbye. On his finger there was a small ring, given to him by a woman girl who was acting as an attendant in the hospital. Jean, doomed to death, believed it was a betrothal ring. "And as you told me nothing of this," cried the woman surgeon, leaving she would stir up Jean's spirit. "Ah, mademoiselle," was the reply, "I can remember the matter of this ring."

But Jean's days are numbered. He can't recover from his wounds.
